

Thatcher faces opposition Prime minister accused of splitting party

Associated Press

LONDON — Former Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine on Wednesday challenged Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in a six-day war for the leadership of the government and the Conservative Party.

Heseltine, who will stand against Thatcher in a ballot among the 372 Conservative legislators on Tuesday, accused her of splitting the party on Europe and alienating voters with an unpopular local government tax.

The challenge by Heseltine, a handsome, self-made millionaire who espouses a "caring capitalism" in contrast to Thatcher's rigorous free market views, poses the biggest threat to Thatcher since she came to power 11 years ago.

"I am persuaded that I will now have a better prospect than Mrs. Thatcher of leading the Conservatives to a fourth general election victory," Heseltine said.

Kenneth Baker, chairman of the troubled Conservative Party, said the 65-year-old prime minister will fight to the end to keep power — through a possible three ballots ending Nov. 29.

"This contest is unwanted and unnecessary," Baker said. "I am sure she will win on the first ballot."

Said Heseltine: "She would fight her corner. That is wholly admirable."

MARGARET THATCHER

Other ministers in the 22-member Cabinet said it was wrong to challenge Thatcher now, with some 16,000 British troops in the Persian Gulf and war threatening against Iraq.

Heseltine, who needs 159 votes in the first secret ballot to force a runoff, said more than 100 legislators have pledged support. Thatcher needs 214 votes to win outright.

If a second ballot is needed, it will be held Nov. 27 and may well bring in other contenders from the Cabinet, such as Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd.

If no one won outright then, a third and final vote among the last three top contenders will be held Nov. 29.

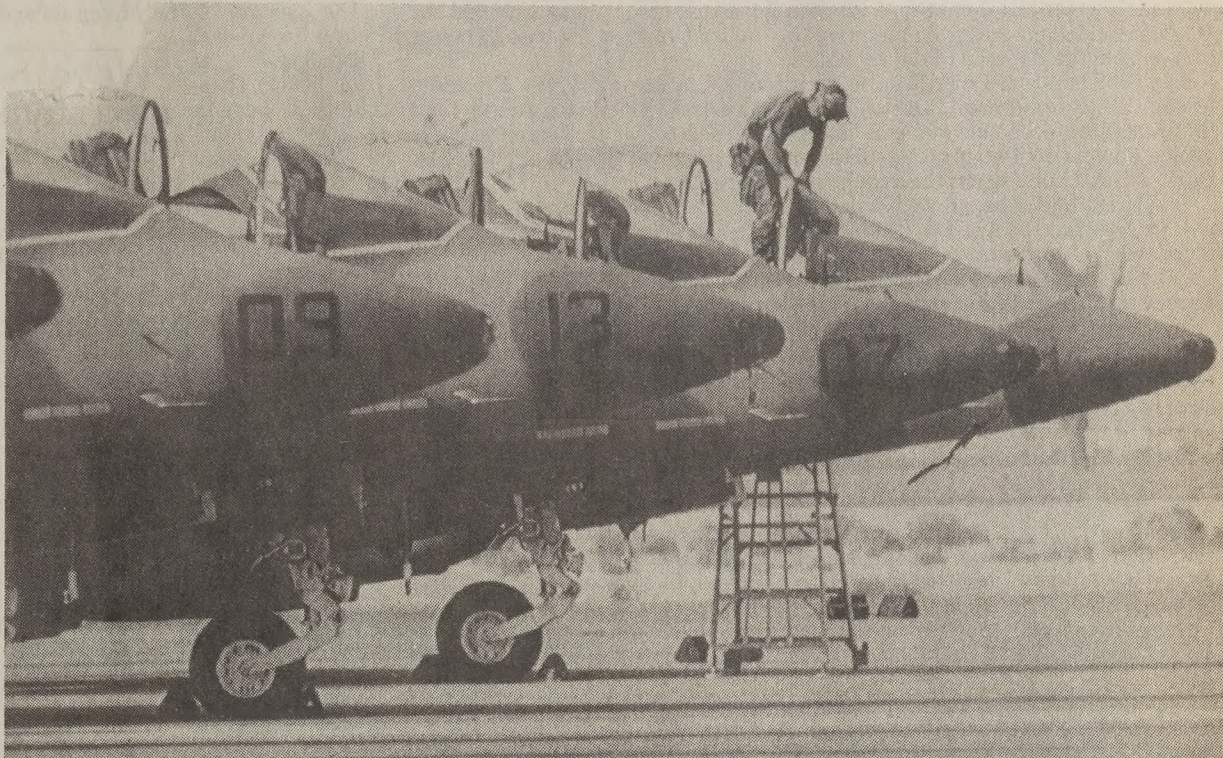

Heseltine, defense secretary until he stalked out of Thatcher's Cabinet in 1986 in a Europe-related dispute, stepped forward a day after her former deputy prime minister delivered a scathing attack on her attitude toward Europe.

The onslaught by Sir Geoffrey Howe, who resigned Nov. 1, appeared to have tipped Heseltine into his long-awaited bid for the leadership.

Heseltine said that if he wins he will order an immediate review of that tax, which he said left "a lingering sense of injustice."

Thatcher is the longest-serving head of government in the Western world and Britain's longest-serving prime minister in this century.

Thatcher will vote for herself by proxy Tuesday from Paris, where she will be at a 35-nation summit of leaders of East and West.

Bush and congressional leaders clash over war-making authority

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush clashed Wednesday with leaders of Congress trying to limit his war-making powers, but he assured anxious lawmakers he has not decided to use military force to push Iraqi troops out of Kuwait.

In a two-hour meeting, Democratic leaders insisted that Bush must seek congressional approval before taking military action in the Persian Gulf. He refused to give any such guarantee.

"The president did not indicate either a commitment to do that or refusal to do that," Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said later.

Secretary of State James A. Baker

III said Bush would follow the Constitution, but he pointedly added, "It's a question of what the Constitution requires."

While acknowledging that only Congress has authority to declare war, Baker said, "There are many, many circumstances and situations indeed where there could be action taken against American citizens or against American interests that would call for a very prompt and substantial response."

Reading from his notes of the meeting, House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., quoted Bush as saying, "We haven't crossed any particular Rubicon here" with the latest increase.

For his own part, Michel said, "I don't look for the kind of action ... some people are anticipating, real soon. We want to continue to counsel with our allies" and the United Nations.

However, he said he was "a little distressed" that some participants in the meeting with Bush had spoken of waiting up to 18 months for sanctions against Iraq to take full effect.

Michel said that was "far beyond the time frame I thought appropriate."

Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., said Democrats were unanimous in counseling patience. "How long are you willing to wait it out to save lives? My answer is, a fair amount of time."

Cold fusion not a good heat source

CHAMBER E. COTHRAN
Universe Staff Writer

Cold fusion does not produce enough heat to serve as a viable energy alternative, a BYU physics professor who conducted experiments in a Colorado mine said Wednesday.

Steven E. Jones and collaborators in several other universities studying neutron emissions 600 meters (80 feet) deep in a lead mine in Leadville, Colo., this summer. They determined that although cold fusion is occurring at some level, the amount of heat generated is not nearly enough to produce a significant amount of energy.

"We've got a big need for energy, and the Middle East crisis has reminded us that our dependence on oil is not wise. But we need to search for a real solution, not a dead-end short-cut like cold fusion," Jones said.

For one watt of heat to be produced by cold fusion, ten trillion neutrons would have to be emitted each second. The fastest rate of neutron emissions observed is only 450 per second, Jones said.

"This is like one dollar to the national debt or a grasshopper trying to get to Mars," Jones said.

Albert Einstein's theory of relativity says energy equals mass times the speed of light squared, requires a number of neutron emissions for energy to be created. He said cold fusion simply cannot meet this quota. "We refute that excess heat is due to fusion. Neutron emissions are far too small," he said.

Although cold fusion cannot be an effective heat source, Jones said there may be other uses for the process, such as curing cancer or detecting plastic explosives in airports.

Jones said his results are more reliable than conclusions made by the University of Utah's Stanley Pons and Martin Fleischmann, who announced in March 1989 that nuclear fusion could be sustained at room temperature.

"Our detectors were 30 percent efficient; Pons' device was only 1 percent efficient," Jones said.

Cold fusion is a nuclear process claimed to generate energy in laboratories at room temperature, as opposed to high temperature fusion which occurs at temperatures ranging from 1,000,000 to 10,000,000 degrees Celsius.

Provo missionaries reap great harvest

CHAD G. DAYBELL

Provo is a great place to serve a mission, according to two missionaries from The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints currently proselytizing in Springfield.

Elder Wade Holbrook and Elder David Wright, who serve as zone leaders in the Utah Provo mission, both see the predominantly LDS population as key to the high baptismal rate in their mission.

The Utah Provo mission is consistently one of the highest baptizing English-speaking missions in the world," said Elder Holbrook, a Seattle, Wash., native. "This is partly because we usually receive help from members while teaching a potential convert."

Elder Holbrook said missionaries in this zone spend approximately 50 percent of their time knocking on doors to find potential converts. He said missionaries concentrate on arreas such as apartment complexes, where they often meet people who are new to the area.

"If we can get in the door (of a non-LDS person), it usually results in a baptism sometime down the road," said Elder Wright, who is from San Mateo, Fla. "Once we can get people to sit down and listen to our message, the people are quite receptive to what we have to say."

Local missionaries have discovered some LDS Church members are extremely helpful, while others don't seem to care, Elder Wright said.

"At some doors, we meet people who consider themselves to be ex-members of the Mormon Church," Elder Holbrook said. "They'll say, 'Oh yeah, I used to go to that church.' Some end up being a little argumentative."

Ron Douglas, an LDS ward mission leader who helps missionaries find friendship potential converts, said most local church leaders are very supportive. See MISSION on page 2

Volunteers needed to plant trees at park fire site

RICHARD LEFRANDT
Universe Staff Writer

One thousand volunteers are needed for an emergency tree planting project at the site of a devastating forest fire that raged through Wasatch Mountain State Park in August. The planting is set for this Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1

TreeUtah is calling for volunteers to help plant 8,500 trees and shrubs in the southern portion of the park, said Dick Buehle, northern regional manager for the Division of State Lands and Forestry.

"(It was) one of the most destructive fires in Utah's history. The blaze killed two firefighters and destroyed 18 homes," said Fran Craigie, public affairs officer for the division of State Lands and Forestry.

"Hundreds of firefighters battled the fire for five days in late August after an ember from a nearby fire jumped. The new fire raced through 2,970 acres of the park," Craigie said.

Those who are involved in Saturday's tree planting project are not just doing a favor to TreeUtah. "By being involved in this project, we will be out helping ourselves," said Anne Burnett, the Wasatch Burn project director for TreeUtah.

"By mechanizing volunteers for the job, we cut costs, and a feeling of community spirit is generated," said Mike Hanson, from the Intermountain Region Forest Service.

For those who want to help, a group will be meeting at the parking lot south of BYU's law building at 8 a.m. and will carpool to Midway.

Because of the delicate condition of the terrain, volunteers are being limited to age 16 and over. They are to meet at the Midway Town Hall. TreeUtah officials are telling volunteers to dress warmly with boots and gloves and to bring a lunch and a shovel.

In the case of bad weather call TreeUtah at 363-5900.

Drug users risk losing licenses

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — States must suspend the driver's licenses of all convicted drug offenders or risk losing part of their federal highway funds under newly approved legislation signed by President Bush.

The measure applies to all states and all illegal drugs, including the 10 states where possession of small amounts of marijuana has been decriminalized but is still considered an infraction of the law.

The legislation, included in the transportation appropriations bill for the current fiscal year, got little attention during the flurry of activity as Congress rushed to leave town at the end of October.

It calls for withholding 5 percent of federal highway funds starting Oct. 1, 1993, from states that fail to impose six-month suspensions on drivers convicted of a drug offense.

The cut would increase to 10 percent on Oct. 1, 1995.

About half the states now allow suspension of drug offenders' licenses, but only a few, such as New Jersey, have mandated such suspensions.

Passed Oct. 27 and signed by Bush on Nov. 5, the measure accomplishes in large part what national drug control policy director William J. Bennett tried to impose more than a year ago.

But White House chief of staff John Sununu, a former governor of New Hampshire, blocked that effort, arguing that states should be allowed to decide such matters for themselves, free from federal government coercion, administration sources say.

The new legislation contains an out for states that don't want to impose the new rules but still want their full share of federal highway funds: Their legislatures must vote specifically against requiring the license suspensions, and their governors must go on record in agreement with that position.

"This forces the states to be accountable," said an administration source, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "We're not going to force you, but if you don't want to do it, you'll have to be public about it."

In states where they can't agree — for example, the governor wants to suspend licenses, but at least one chamber of the state legislature does not — the federal highway funds would be cut.

Kremlin frees prices on luxury items

MOSCOW — The government said Wednesday it is lifting controls on the prices of luxury goods in an effort to encourage production. Hours later, Russia's parliament declared the decree void in the largest of the 15 Soviet republics.

The move by the Russian Federation set up the latest struggle in the war between the central Soviet and Russian governments. It demonstrated the fragmentation and confusion plaguing the Soviet Union as the base of power moves from the Kremlin to the republics.

The confrontation came despite an attempt Sunday by Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin to patch up their differences on economic reform. The two agreed to set up commissions to decide how to divide authority between the two governments. Yeltsin also claimed Gorbachev agreed to a coalition government.

The latest battle began with a decree by the national Council of Ministers that prices would be freed on goods "of no essential influence on people's living standards" — such as jewelry, furniture and American cigarettes.

Other goods covered by the decree, which was released by the Tass news agency, are natural furs, carpets, high-tech electronics, cut glassware, china, spare car parts and imports such as whiskey and gin.

The government said freeing prices would "provide extra incentives to increase the production of consumer goods and saturate the market."

46 feared dead in Swiss plane crash

ZURICH, Switzerland — An Alitalia DC-9 jetliner with 40 passengers and six crew members aboard crashed Wednesday night, during a rainstorm, into a hillside outside Zurich and exploded, Swiss authorities said.

All aboard flight AZ404, en route from Milan to Zurich, were feared dead in the crash, Kloten airport spokesman Peter Gutknecht said. The crash occurred in a forested area near the village of Stadel, five miles north of Zurich's airport.

Swiss Radio said debris from the plane was burning more than two hours after the crash. Rescuers pulled at least 10 bodies from the wreckage, police said.

One rescuer at the scene told Swiss television that pieces of the plane were burning "like a volcano." The wreckage was scattered across a swath of the wooded hillside, witnesses told Swiss TV. Italy's state-run RAI television said it appeared unlikely the disaster was weather-related, but added that first reports appear to discount the possibility of a terrorist act.

Study links hostility to heart trouble

DALLAS — Hostile teenagers are likely to grow up to be adults who have high cholesterol, according to a study that finds new links between anger and heart trouble.

For years, many experts assumed that hard-driving, impatient people with classic Type A personalities were at high risk of heart attacks. But many have grown skeptical of this theory, and some now believe that the truly lethal personality trait is hostility and anger.

"People with high hostility at age 19 tend to have high cholesterol levels at 40," Dr. Redford B. Williams of Duke University said Wednesday.

Redford's study was among several presented at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association to suggest that hostile people are more prone to heart trouble — both because of the effects of adrenaline and other hormones on their bodies and their tendency to have unhealthy living habits.

One report from Yale University researchers found that people who react to situations with strong emotions, particularly anger, are especially likely to die of cardiac arrest. When people get angry, their bodies pump out stress hormones, which trigger the body to release fat into the bloodstream.

Catholic bishops want sex ed in schools

WASHINGTON — U.S. Roman Catholic bishops on Wednesday adopted their first comprehensive guidelines on human sexuality, portraying it in exalting terms and calling for it to be taught in Catholic schools.

Against some opposition and attempts at delay, the document was approved by a strong voice vote by the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

It says sexual education should be taught in schools and parishes as well as in families, a provision strongly opposed by several bishops who said many parents want such education kept in the home. One said families might remove their children from Catholic schools if sex education is required.

Describing sexuality as a "wonderful gift," the bishops say they approach the subject with a "deep and abiding sense of appreciation, wonder and respect."

The 185-page document was developed by a special task force, including experts in various fields. The document affirms the church's traditional teaching that condones intercourse only in marriage.

'Guestages' replace 'hostages' in Iraq

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Saddam Hussein has contributed a new word to the English language: "guestages," short for "guest-hostages."

The Iraqi president's ministers routinely warn reporters not to refer to the thousands of Westerners banned from leaving Iraq as hostages.

"This is a very, very bad and dirty word, and I'm not going to accept it," says Information and Culture Minister Latif Jassim during his news briefings.

And a warning in Iraq today should be taken seriously.

After several such warnings, the word "guestages" entered the lexicon of Iraqispeak.

"Are you a hos..." The moment you ask any of the hundreds of Westerners held in Baghdad hotels, comes the swift reply: "No, I'm a guestage."

To tell the world that Western news reports on the conditions of hostages held at strategic sites are wrong, Iraq's state-run television has started a new program, "Guest News," in which Americans, British, Japanese and Germans are shown playing pool or giving interviews.

Center provides education options

The purpose of the Mountainland Center for Applied Technology at Utah Valley Community College is to serve community needs and not to compete with BYU or any other schools, said its director.

"We're really a stepping stone to get people into a better situation."

— Royanne Boyer
Mountainland Center director

"We're really a stepping stone to get people into a better situation," said Royanne Boyer. "First, we get people into the workforce, and then they start feeling better about themselves, and a lot of them go on to college," she said.

Boyer said there are a lot of students at BYU who know someone who could benefit from classes at the center.

The breadwinner who is in school could get short-term training to help support the family, or a mother with a missionary to support could get training to bring in extra income, she said.

The center gives alternatives and options to people who can't go through a four-year program for whatever reason, Boyer said.

The center has three focus areas that benefit the community. Short-term intensive training is one of these areas, she said.

"We provide short-term, intensive, non-credit training in computers, commercial and professional driving, nurses aide certification, police dispatching, basic office skills and flagging. We also offer vocational and technology training."

Earl Grossen, director for the short-term intensive training program, said students are often referred from regional community agencies to help them get back on their feet.

"The referring agency and state grants help pay the costs for educating these people recovering from a downturn," he said.

Customized training is another program the center offers to help the community, Boyer said. "This is a program that helps local companies upgrade their employee's skills, thereby providing better service to the community," she said.

Boyer said the center works with companies to design training programs for their employees and then helps institute them.

The third arm of the center is a state program called Customized Training for Economic Growth (CTEG), Boyer said.

It is a program people know very little about, she said. "The state reimburses companies when they expand, providing they meet certain requirements."

Gary Phelps, director of CTEG, said the program is the state's way of saying thank you for creating full-time positions.

rounding BYU and the MTC. We had some success in that area," he said.

Elder Wright said heckling from people is as common here as anywhere. "I've had to dodge a few bottles thrown at us by passers-by. We get our share of name calling and gestures, too."

Elder Holbrook said a lady once sent her dog after them. "My companion got a nice bite on the leg," he said.

"I didn't know what to expect at first, but I knew the Lord wanted me here," said Elder Wright. "I consider it a blessing to be serving in this mission."

"It may not seem as if the missionaries are out there, but they are often covering an area that includes more than 30 wards," Douglas said.

Elder Wright said it is difficult to be spread so thin, but it keeps them busy.

Elder Holbrook didn't experience any jet lag in traveling from the Missionary Training Center in Provo to his first assigned area; he just crossed the street to Wymount Terrace.

BYU challenge team takes 1st

AM DONALD G. CROSBY JR.
Staff Writer

The Army ROTC Ranger Challenge Team won first place in the University of Nevada at Reno Ranger Challenge Competition Saturday.

The ranger challenge competition is held throughout the state on a brigade, state and regional level.

Parsons, 24, a senior majoring in geography from Chico, Fla., said, "The BYU Rangers hold national records in some events, and this year's team could equal or beat those records (in future competitions)."

BYU's team is actually divided into two teams. Parsons is a member of the second ranger team. "This year's first is highly competitive, and the second team could beat most competition," he said.

The team competes in six events consisting of weapons training, Army physical fitness training, a 10-kilometer ruck march, the rope bridge, target shooting and a wide assault course.

Captain Bill Gibbs, assistant professor of military science, is the adviser to the BYU Ranger Challenge Team. Gibbs said, "The average physical training score on BYU's team was 299.75, which is 2 1/2 points from a perfect mark. We had only one cadet miss the maximum by two sit-ups."

The Army Physical Fitness Training Test requires the cadets to do 82 push-ups and 92 sit-ups, both in under two minutes, and run two miles in under 11.54 minutes in order to maximize the test.

Gibbs said the next highest team had an average of 288 points on the test.

BYU also came in first in the rope bridge, weapons assembly and 10-kilometer ruck march competitions. BYU won the overall competition with 57 points out of a possible 60.

The University of California at Chico came in 2nd with 44 points and University of Nevada at Reno came in 3rd with 43 points, Gibbs said.

Cadet Captain Will Franklin, 23, a junior majoring in history from Vidor, Texas, said, "The team exemplifies teamwork and selflessness."

Palestinian expert will speak about independence

By ALDEN WEIGHT
Universe Staff Writer

An expert on the Palestinian issue will speak to students today about the current Palestinian situation.

Dr. Muhammad Hallaj will speak at 11 a.m. in the Kennedy Center. His topic will be "The Palestinian Declaration of Independence: Two Years Later."

Hallaj, according to a press release from the BYUSA Office of Public Communications, is currently the director of the Palestine Research and Educational Center.

Hallaj also publishes the magazine "Palestine Perspective," a Washington, D.C.-based pro-Palestinian movement magazine. He is also a former academic vice president of Birzeit University, located on the West Bank between Israel and Jordan.

He received his doctorate in political science from the University of Florida in Gainesville. He has also taught at Jacksonville University in Florida and at the University of Jordan in Amman.

Hallaj is a columnist for The Arab American News in Dearborn, Mich., and has published many articles in journals. He has contributed to several books, including "Palestinian Agenda for the West Bank and Gaza" and "Palestinian Rights: Affirmation and Denial."

One Palestinian student at BYU views Hallaj's speech as an educational opportunity for those concerned about the Middle East situation.

Vivian Mushahwar, a 23-year-old electrical engineering student from Ramallah, Palestine, said students should educate themselves on the issue.

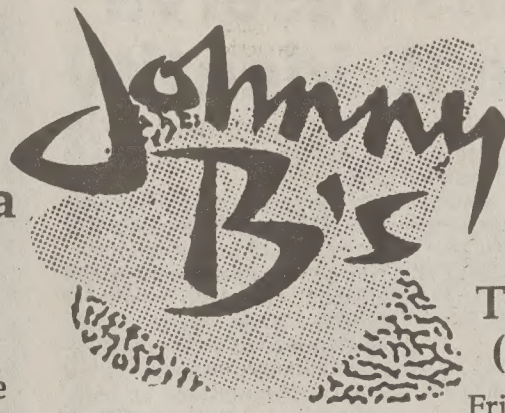

Americans need to understand why Palestinians do what they do and what the Palestinians want, Mushahwar said. "There are many things happening there which are connected with what happens here."

She said Palestinians are just like any other nation in that "they just want to be free."

The lecture is co-sponsored by the Arabic Club, the Kennedy Center and BYUSA.

Palestinians deserve independent identity

Israel cracked down again Wednesday on the nearly three-year-old Palestinian uprising by imposing more curfews and by announcing plans to halve the Arab work force from the occupied lands.

It is ironic that Israel's survival would require the suppression of another people after centuries of suppression themselves. They should have learned that suppression only creates hatred, and Israel can not afford enemies now.

UNIVERSE OPINION

Since 1948, when Israel gained statehood, the Arab people of Palestine have systematically been deprived of every qualification needed by any people to become a nation-state or an independent entity. Those qualifications are cultural identity, central government, diplomatic recognition and territory.

By forcing Arabs into ghettos called occupied lands, and by not allowing any form of government to exist in Palestinian neighborhoods, Israel has forced the Arab culture to teach its children that throwing rocks is the only way to be heard.

The latest developments have confined roughly 420,000 people in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip indoors and have closed schools in the West Bank, keeping 300,000 Arab students out of classrooms.

The government further expects 60,000 of 180,000 Arab workers to lose their jobs. The positions will be filled with Soviet immigrants and discharged soldiers.

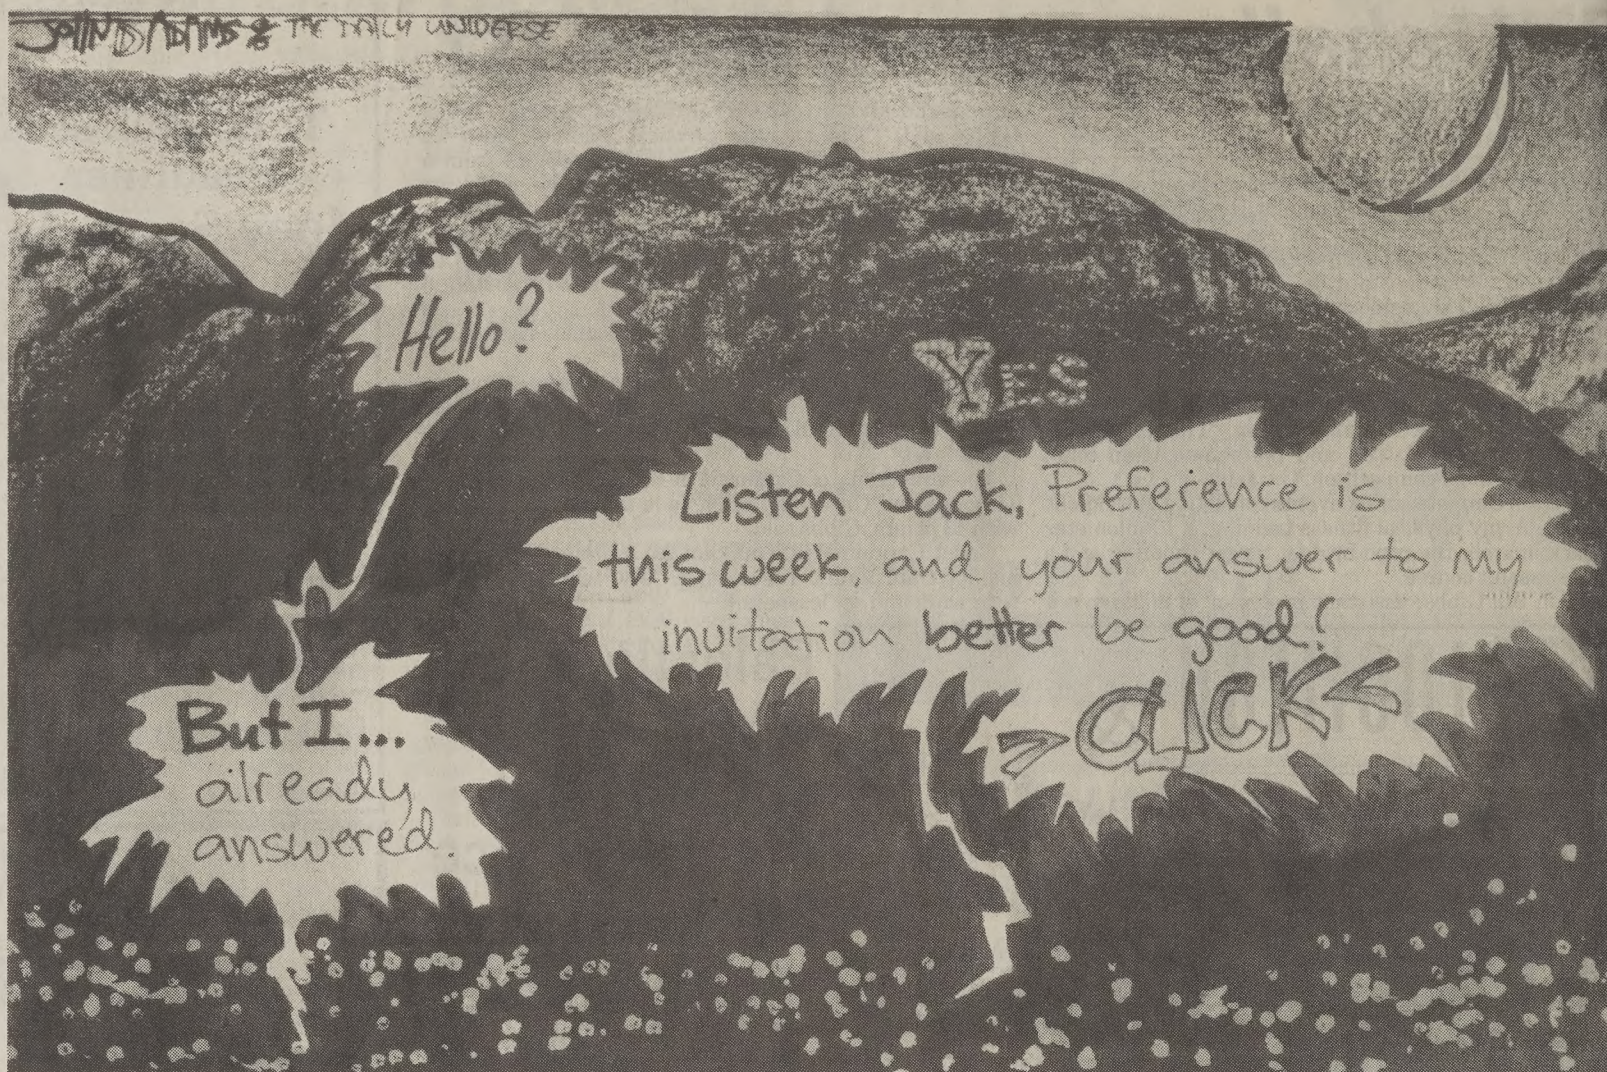

There needs to be a state of Israel and there needs to be a state of Palestine. Unfortunately both states demand to live on the same land. For now, Israel has the upper hand through education and resources.

But unless attitudes change nothing will be resolved. Children on both sides are being raised to hate each other.

The first step to changing attitudes might be to return respect to the Arab people by recognizing they exist and by allowing them a democratic voice of their own.

Until then, only the rocks will be heard.

Unethical

To the Editor:

The Salt Lake City Olympic Bid Committee and the Utah State Office of Education recently announced they are introducing a program that will teach Utah students in grades kindergarten through high school about winter Olympic sports.

The ostensible "primary purpose" is educating the students "about winter sports and physical fitness."

Uh huh. That is like saying that the primary purpose of fast food ads or candied cereal ads made for children is to teach them about good nutrition.

Further down, the announcement includes the statement, "The program will also include a history of Utah's Olympic bid, and what hosting the 1998 Olympics would mean for the state."

This is their primary purpose—to get at parents through their children—just like the fast food ads.

It is distressing to see state funds being used for such transparent propaganda. Apparently, the bid people have decided to change their tactics, since they only managed to achieve a very small vote margin in return for their multi-million dollar ad campaign for funding of the preliminary bid.

Their new philosophy seems to be: "Out of the mouths of babes"—and the pockets of their parents. That holds up the Olympic torch—but who's going to get burned?

Soviet BYUnion?

To the Editor:

What a mess Gorbachev has made of the Soviet Union. By allowing his people the right to have an opinion and express it without fear of being sent to prison, by introducing a bit of free agency and self-determination, by allowing citizens the right to complain and moan he's really stirred up a hornet's nest.

Democracy is rampant, prison camps have had to close their doors, people want to own their homes, independent thought and political viewpoints are spreading like a cancer all across the country. Soviet Georgia wants independence. Common folk are even going to heavy metal concerts.

Those Soviets are so ungrateful. They should have told Heavenly Father that they didn't want to go there.

And, if they didn't like it when they got there, they should have left—ballet dancers and athletes do it all the time.

Gosh, it seems like there are lots of people here on campus who would leap at the opportunity to live daily where choices like jobs, religion and political opinion are so simplified for them.

I imagine that they even would appreciate a simplified dress and grooming standard, "wear your brown shirt because it's the only one you've got."

But instead of "loving it or leaving it," these Russians had to go and change things to reflect the wants and desires of the populace.

Can you believe their audacity?

There is still time, Mikhail Gorbachev. You can still crack down and avoid having girls in shorts and guys with ponytails and beads walking around your country.

Just post your unemployed KGB agents in the cafeterias and libraries and you can nail these liberals. Then without all these distractions, your people will get back to making vodka and tanks, and we can get to our arms race.

A little respect

To the Editor:

As an Army cadet I had the privilege to participate in a Pass in Review Ceremony on the Abraham O. Smoot Building quad in conjunction with Patriot's Week. The ceremony was unique because the reviewing officer was a Vietnam prisoner of war.

I enjoyed his speech—that is until a rude bicyclist rode through the middle of the formation. Perhaps he didn't realize that several hundred cadets, in uniform, were standing in ranks to honor this man.

I am appreciative of the students who were thoughtful enough to make their way around the formation. And for those who were not quite so thoughtful, how would it be if someone rode a bicycle across the stage during an orchestra concert in which you were participating?

The ROTC only occupies the quad for about four hours each semester; please be considerate of this small inconvenience. (Or perhaps we could occupy your front yard with an M-60 machine gun next time.) Thanks.

No problem

To the Editor:

Five year students are a problem at BYU? I thought it was a standard. I would like to commend President Lee on taking a hard look at this growing trend. He asserts that our broad general education and religion requirements are necessary. I agree, we need more well-rounded people in our society.

He presents three possible causes for the extended stays: majors demanding too many classes, students retaking classes to get a better grade and a lax attitude due to cheap tuition.

I think that the real cause lies deep within the BYU system.

The administration specifies to faculty that grades are to be given on a curve with the mean at a B—in upper-division classes. That puts a formerly A- student like myself at a B-average. If I have aspirations of graduate school or a well-paying job at the end of my stay, that just doesn't cut it.

I am then forced into one of two scenarios: cut back on classes or plunge through my classes and retake those in which I don't make the needed grade. In order to graduate in four years I need to take 18 credits a semester.

Soapbox is an open forum for student expression held every Wednesday from noon to 1 p.m. in the Checkboard Quad next to the Ernest L. Wilkinson Center. Soapbox will not be held Nov. 21 because of the Thanksgiving holiday.

SOAPBOX SUMMARY

WAR AND OIL — "I don't believe in dying for the price of oil. But that's not the real issue. We live in an oil-based economy. When oil prices go up, that affects everything else. I don't think you want one man controlling over 50 percent of the world's oil reserves. And it's not going to be any easier to deal with this situation in five years when Saddam Hussein has battlefield nuclear weapons. The issue is not gasoline—it's our whole way of life. I'm not willing to sacrifice my children's future to one man's expansionist desires." Another speaker responded, "Our whole way of life will change? There's no way. We have so much oil in this country that we're not even using."

FIVE-YEAR STUDENTS — "How many of you here today are going to graduate after five years? I am; and I really resent President Lee insulting our intelligence by telling us that we're causing a problem by taking the time to get the most out of our education. Not everyone can argue cases before the U.S. Supreme Court."

ISRAELI SUPPORT — "There seem to be some very intelligent people here, so perhaps someone can explain to me some good reasons for the United States supporting Israel. We give them $4 billion every year while at the same time we have all kinds of problems here at home." Another speaker responded, "I'll give you a reason: money! The Jewish interests in the Western world, unfortunately control a lot more money than the Arab interests."

TEACHER TROUBLES — "My sister told me a long time ago to take professors and not classes. If we have teachers that can't teach, it's really up to us to do something. We should vote with our feet and drop the class."

EVOLUTIONARY NOTE — "I'd just like to tell whoever left the banana and the evolutionary note to my Biology 100 teacher that it was really tacky. I am glad that evolution is taught here at BYU. Our professors are just trying to let us know what is taught in the world around us. The note said that since the professor was related to chimpanzees, here was a banana. It also warned him not to let his knuckles drag on the ground."

MIDDLE EAST CONFLICT — "If we don't fight this war now, we're going to have to fight a much costlier and bloodier war four or five years from now when Iraq gets the bomb."

FOOTBALL PREDICTION — "My opinion is that the University of Utah is going to get their butts kicked this weekend."

FOOTBALL CONCERNS — "I'm a transfer student from the University of Utah, and let me just say that the last point is obvious. I heard on National Public Radio the other day that a lot of schools put a lot of money into football from their general education funds. I just hope that isn't happening here at BYU. I would surely hate to see my tithing money pay for football helmets just so we can beat the University of Utah in football."

Students should understand housing deposit obligations

The Ombudsman's Office has received a number of complaints concerning the use of student housing deposits. The BYU Housing Office, the organization directly responsible for all BYU-approved housing, provides a mediation service designed to successfully resolve these types of problems. But all students should understand their rights and obligations in these matters.

A security deposit serves three purposes. First, it is considered a form of collateral, which "encourages" tenants to care for the landlord's property and protect it from abuse and/or damage. If tenants damage the property, the landlord has money available to make any needed repairs or clean the unit.

Second, landlords require a security deposit to induce tenants to fulfill their contracts. If a tenant moves out before his lease expires, the landlord uses the security deposit as if it were rent/income and sustains less of a loss while attempting to fill the empty space. For this reason, the deposit is often a substantial amount.

Finally, if tenants overstay their welcome, remaining longer than the terms of the lease permit, the landlord may also decide to charge them a per diem (daily fee) and can subtract this amount from their security deposit. Since the deposit serves no purpose beyond the terms of the lease, it must be returned to the tenant within 30 days after he or she vacates the premises.

If a landlord (or manager) withholds part or all of a deposit, he or she must explain (in writing) the reasons for doing so.

However, if the tenant moves out without leaving a forwarding address, the landlord may return the deposit within 15 days of receiving the tenant's new address, even if that time extends beyond the allotted 30 days. Responsibility for providing the new address rests with the renter, not with the manager.

If the owner does not return the deposit, or fails to send the tenant a written explanation for the amount withheld, the landlord is in violation of the law and can be taken to court. Utah laws permit tenants to recover the deposit and a penalty of $100 plus court costs. However, students should never file a claim against their landlord unless the facts will bear examination.

The only way to ensure this is to provide the proper documentation. Keep copies of all receipts that could prove helpful: contracts, letters, canceled checks, etc.

These can serve as "reminders" while negotiating a complaint with a landlord or as evidence in small claims court. Most disputes of this type are avoidable, and many can be resolved easily. But should a problem ever arise, do your part so the law will be on your side.

BYU ousted in 1st round

JOHN MILLER
Universe Sports Writer

Coach Roger Reid had his first taste of defeat in the Marriott Center last night when his Cougars fell to Tennessee State University 80-83 in front of 15,130 fans. The difference in the game was the veterans hit the key buckets," Reid said.

Also, their quickness really hurt

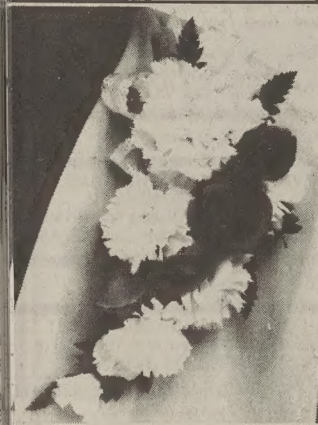

BYU was led in scoring by 7' 6" forward Shawn Bradley, who poured in 20 points and pulled down 14 rebounds. "It was quite a task trying to stop Bradley because he is really mobile," ETSU's center Greg Dennis also scoring in double figures for the Cougars were forward Steve Schreiner with 20 and guard Mark Heslop with 16. Keith Jennings of ETSU led all scorers with 26 points.

The two big factors in the game were turnovers and three-point shooting. BYU turned the ball over 20 times to ETSU's 13. ETSU also converted 13 of 28 from the three-point line to BYU's 3-4.

"We hit the three-pointers in the crucial times," ETSU's coach, Alan LeForce, said.

The game came down to the final minute of play when Schreiner hit a fade-away jumper from the right side to pull the Cougars within one, 80-81. But with 13 seconds left, Jennings was fouled and converted on both of his free throw attempts to give ETSU an 80-83 lead.

Heslop's three-point shot at the buzzer bounced off the front of the rim and sent ETSU on to the second round of the Dodge National Invitational Tournament.

"It's the worst feeling in the world watching the other team celebrating on our home floor," Bradley said in the post-game interview.

Coach Reid does not believe that it will happen again because of the team's performance.

He said, "I'm very pleased to see where we can go now. It was a good performance, and I liked what I saw."

Leader of the line

Fort's hard work gets results

By DAVID L. HANCOCK
Universe Sports Writer

At a position where recognition is almost non-existent, BYU offensive lineman Neal Fort has made a name for himself and has become a candidate for the Outland Trophy. The Outland is awarded annually to the player selected as the best lineman in the country, either on offense or defense.

"It's an honor to even be considered for the Outland. Not many people are recognized as being in that class of player," Fort said.

Dick Rosetta, sportswriter for the Salt Lake Tribune and member of the Outland Trophy selection committee, said Fort is a candidate because he is the leader of the BYU offensive line, which is one of the best in the country.

"Fort's abilities, size, potential and good pro recommendation were all factors for his selection as a candidate," Rosetta said.

Fort gives much of the credit for his success this year to good coaching and the type of program that BYU has. "If you listen and learn while you're here and work hard, the recognition will come," Fort said.

According to offensive coordinator Roger French, Fort believes what he says about hard work. "No one on this team works harder than Neal. In practice he stays busy all the time, hustling and running," French said.

French said Fort's hard work and dedication have made him an Outland candidate. "Things are beginning to pay off for him. He is finally starting to realize his potential."

After each game, French grades the linemen on their performance at run blocking and pass blocking with a plus and minus system.

For the Cougars' nine games this season, Fort has been graded the highest six times.

Fort said the other linemen give him a hard time and say he is graded high because of his relationship with French.

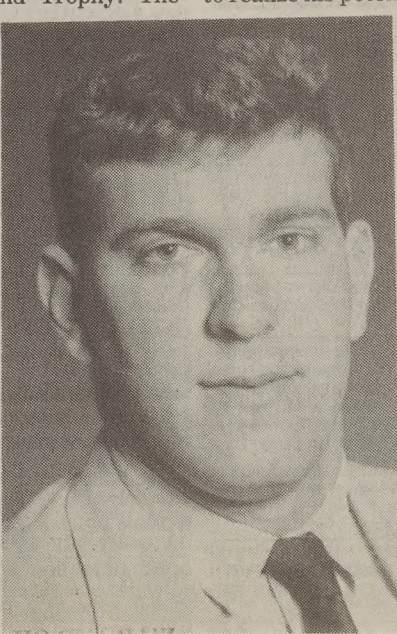

"Just like every teacher has a favorite student, they think it's that way for me."

They say it's just a gift I have," Fort said, with a laugh.

Fort said he came to BYU largely because French was friends with his high school coach, Cal Jones, at Central Union High in El Centro, Calif.

"I knew this would be an excellent place to play ball, but it was largely because of those two coaches that I was recruited by BYU," Fort said.

"Coach Jones was the first one who really got me motivated to play, and he gave me plenty of opportunities to See FORT page 7 and improve," Fort said.

Fort said he never enjoyed football at that time, but was busy skateboarding or riding BMX bikes instead. "I tried football but didn't like it," Fort said.

Now, football is about all Fort has
for. After all, being a standout one of the best offensive lines in the football does not come easy.
"My unity is the key. We really don't on that," Fort said. "We've been there now two years so we know to play together."
Quarterback Ty Detmer is one who loves this offensive line is the best end. "They probably work the best of anyone out there and they get the least amount of recognition," Detmer.

Detmer wouldn't be able to do anything out there without them. They really make my life easy," Detmer said.

With recognition from being a candidate for the Outland, several scouts from professional teams have been seen at practices and games looking at Fort.

About the possibility of playing pro football, Fort said, "I'm just going to take it a day at a time. We'll see what happens."
Meanwhile, BYU fans remember that the Cougars have had two Outland Trophy winners in the past five years. In 1986, defensive end Jason Buck was awarded the trophy, then last year offensive lineman Mohammed Elewonibi received the trophy after only his first full year as a starter.

Both Buck and Elewonibi are playing in the National Football League now. Buck is in his fourth year with the Cincinnati Bengals and Elewonibi is a rookie with the Washington Redskins.

2 local hospitals to be remodeled

By STACY VAN
BLANKENSTEIN
Universe Staff Writer

Although there is an increasing problem of hospitals closing in smaller towns across the nation, it has not seemed to stop two hospitals in the valley from undergoing million dollar expansions, a local hospital administrator said.

Hospitals in small towns are usually owned by the cities, do not have enough equipment and can't generate enough business to stay in operation, said Stephen L. Walston, hospital administrator at Mountain View Hospital.

Mountain View Hospital in Payson and Utah Valley Regional Medical Center in Provo are both owned by corporations, which are funding the construction.

Mountain View Hospital's project is divided into two phases, costing a total of $8.7 million. Phase One will create a three-story patient tower consisting of an emergency room, pediatric unit and intensive care unit. Phase Two will include additional operating rooms, expansion of same-day surgery facilities and renovation of the maternity and obstetrical areas. Each phase will take about a year.

"The expansion has occurred not to create a need but because of the growing need," said Dr. N. Dwight Williams, a member of the medical staff and chairman of the governing board at Mountain View Hospital.

Williams said the greatest need is to provide all services at one hospital, so the patient will not have to be transferred to various hospitals.

Utah Valley Regional Medical Center's expansion project will provide the medical center with a $2.1 million intensive care unit. In the new facility, each patient will be in a private room with an assigned staff member. The unit now has open beds with curtains between patients, said Marie Prothero, administrative assistant for critical care.

AT-A-GLANCE

The At-A-Glance column is for announcements and notices of meetings of organizations and groups which are not BYUSA-sanctioned clubs. Announcements from officially recognized clubs appear in the Clubnotes column which is published on Thursdays.
